

Appledore Research Privacy Policy, May 2018

Appledore Research holds personal contact details for all registered users of this website. Registration occurs when you fill out our form in order to access free or premium content. We use this data to enable the operation of the website and the distribution of any content you request.

If you opt in, Appledore Research will use these contact details specifically to deliver content, notifications and similar information – for example we will notify you of new relevant research and send you our periodic newsletter.

In addition, Appledore Research works with third parties to create and distribute free Appledore research documents, including white papers. On occasion third parties elect to distribute our premium research to interested parties at their expense. If you choose to download any of this free material, Appledore Research will share contact details of registered users with the named third party. We will share this information only with your explicit opt in, requested at the time of joint whitepaper download.

We never sell our list of registered users nor allow it to be used for commercial solicitations, except those cases specifically referenced in this privacy document, above.

Thank you for your trust.